

Right combination has become second nature to Bolidt

Combining is a profession. To actually award the name combination to something, it has to be put together in such a way that it is united as a combined play. Bricx is a true artist in this field. The ceramics are made with non-extinguishing enthusiasm for the construction of contemporary buildings and Bricx defines architecture as art. Developments within our environment are also expressed in buildings, since environmental progress lies hidden in contemporary construction projects. 'Constructing as a response to the world around it' is how the proud manufacturer of roof tiles and masonry appropriately describes it. Bricx's ceramics always construct the outside of a building and are therefore partly responsible for the first impression!

Architects, building contractors and principals also get a first impression when it comes to Bricx's ceramic beauties. A show room is called a showroom for a reason: you want to be able to show your products to impress potential buyers, showing them what you have got to offer! It is no different at Bricx's show room in Gilze-Rijen. An important element to achieve this was the flooring: a large surface that accounts for the atmosphere and character of a space in a big way. Bricx is the one to provide products for the outside of a building, but there are also the ones who are true artists with products that are a valuable contribution to the inside. In Bolidt a floor partner was found that was able to lift the overall product presentation to a higher level, by rewarding the show room with a Bolidtop[®] 525. It is simple, modern and tasteful. The Bolidtop system supports an inviting atmosphere in some of the more dark corners but enhances the sense of light and space throughout the whole show room. There is already a new tenant for the same building as Bricx and that tenant can also reap the fruits of the Bolidtop systems, because once again Bolidt is asked to provide floor advice.

It looks like Bricx and Bolidt may also be awarded the title of 'combination'!
